

Engineering Geology

The study of many types of rock formations and their physical characteristics is emphasised in this lab. There is a focus on regional geological issues when discussing topics like rocks and minerals, soils, and seismic activity. The physical characteristics of minerals are another emphasis of this lab course.

